WELCOME TO NEUKÖLLN

When real estate developer Ekkehard Streletzki opened the Estrel Hotel back in 1994, many wondered why he chose the borough of Neukölln as the preferred location for Germany’s largest hotel. Today he is known as a Berlin visionary for seeing the transformation of this neighborhood before it began to unfold. Aware of the city’s plans to create the BER airport nearby in the city’s South East as well as the expansion of the ring road making the city center reachable in 15 minutes, he saw the potential early on.

In addition to the expansion of the city ring motorway which will give the Estrel its own exit by 2021, the Estrel is surrounded by excellent public transportation options, whether it be the M41 bus right out front or the city’s rapid transit network accessible at the Sonnenalle Station just a five minutes’ walk away. Now situated in one of Berlin’s most dynamic neighborhoods, the allure of the trendy shops, restaurants, cafés, bars and notable points of interest has made the district “the place to be” attracting young people from all around the world. This “kiez”, as Berliners call their neighborhoods has even made it to the top 10 of the hippest districts in the world.
FROM THE ESTREL TO NEUKÖLLN

ONLY 5 MINUTES FROM THE ESTREL
Today’s area of Neukölln dates back to 1237 to its origin as the city of Cölln which was eventually merged with larger Berlin. The district of modern Neukölln developed from five villages: Rixdorf, Bohemian Rixdorf, Buckow, Rudow and Britz. First mentioned in documents was Britz in 1237, followed by Richardsdorp in 1360 which was later renamed Rixdorf.

About 100 years ago, Rixdorf’s reputation had deteriorated due to its inhabitants’ ongoing binge drinking and brawls so that in 1912 it was decided to rename the place Neukölln. The namesake stems from the settlement further north of the then double city Berlin-Cölln.

A territorial reform in the 1920s incorporated Neukölln together with Britz, Rudow and Buckow into the larger city of Berlin. Since the administrative reform in 2001, Neukölln has become one of the 12 main districts in Berlin and with its 330,000 inhabitants from more than 150 nations, it has also become one of the most densely and internationally populated boroughs in Germany’s capital.

BOHEMIAN VILLAGE
Just a few minutes away from the Estrel, discover the remnants of the old village of Bohemian Rixdorf. The townlet was founded by Bohemians who emigrated from their homeland in pursuit of religious freedom and resettled around Richardstrasse. A statue on Kirchgasse depicts king Friedrich Wilhelm I. who supported the refugees at the time and granted them the right to settle. To this day, the 8th generation descendants of those Bohemian migrants still live on Richardstrasse. A small museum at Kirchgasse 5 documents the history of this Czech enclave. In the narrow alleys and streets of Rixdorf, you will find many well-preserved historic buildings. For example, there is a 400-year-old forge that runs blacksmithing courses, hosts exhibitions, and also serves as a local meeting point for women’s empowerment. In addition, there is the 15th century Bethlehem church that is still used by the Bohemian-Lutheran congregation. Lovely cafés and restaurants around the Richardstrasse round out the appeal of Alt-Rixdorf.

ALT-RIXDORF
When it first opened in 1914, the Neukölln public baths were known as the prettiest and largest of their kind in Europe, with 10,000 bathers flocking to the pool every day. Modelled according to an antique thermal bath, the architect Heinrich Best created a unique ensemble combining the baths with a public library and shared atrium. The spacious Roman-Russian styled bathhouse consists of a domed skylight structure with a large rectangular and smaller circular pool. Today, the Stadtbad Neukölln pool facility is managed by Berlin’s network of public pools, the “Berlin Bäder-Betrieb”.

THE TOWN HALL OF NEUKÖLLN

Inaugurated in 1908, the Town Hall of Neukölln was designed by Reinhold Kiefer who was at that time the architect and director of urban development in the city of Berlin. The administrative building with its 500 rooms accommodates the district administration of Neukölln as well as the tourist information centre. The roof of the building is adorned with the statue of the goddess Fortuna, created by Josef Rauch in 1905. 177 steps lead to the top of the dominant town hall tower. From the tower’s observation deck the entire city skyline can be seen.

HEIMATHAFEN NEUKÖLLN

Since its inception in 2009, the Heimathafen Neukölln has been centre for concerts, theatre, performance and debate. Before Rixdorf became Neukölln, it was considered the suburban entertainment focal point for Berlin’s unpretentious common folk. Today, the Heimathafen Neukölln is trying to re-capture that Rixdorf feeling and lifestyle by staging a diverse cultural program at this historic place.

KINDL – CENTRE FOR CONTEMPORARY ART

This brick expressionist monument of the 1920s has been transformed into a unique exhibition hub. Once the Kindl brewery in Neukölln, this industrial building complex is now home to exhibits featuring the works of renowned international contemporary artists. There are a number of large shows each year as well as artist talks, lectures and concerts.

The culinary offerings of the centre’s Café Babette is an additional highlight along with the beer garden during the open air season.

KÖRNERPARK

Landscaped 100 years ago, the 1977 reconstruction of the Körnerpark represented one of the biggest projects in the district. The worthwhile result may be seen today in that this Neukölln park is considered one of the most beautiful green spaces in all of Berlin. Originally a gravel pit, there are long staircases with balustrades that lead to a grassy area five to seven meters below street level. Water flows six levels down before it is swirled through the air by a fountain. Small canals run through the magnificent park lined with trimmed hedges, colourful flower arrangements and Sycamore trees.

The former orangery houses a gallery and café which have become important cultural locations in Neukölln, and a place where national and international contemporary artists exhibit their works. “Summer in the Park” and “Salon Music” are two public concert series that may be enjoyed during Spring and Autumn.

THE GREEN SOUTH OF BERLIN

First documented in 1237, Britz is one of the oldest neighborhoods of Neukölln. Popular attractions are the Britzer Mühle, (windmill) Britz manor and the Horseshoe Estate built in the famous Bauhaus style. Further South from Britz is Rudow where you can walk along part of the former Berlin Wall or follow the Rudower Fliess into the very green suburbs of Berlin. From the Estrel Hotel, Britz can be reached in about 20 minutes by car or public transportation.

This 300 year old Prussian manor is considered a jewel among the landscape of Berlin Palaces. Its historic rooms from the era of Kaiser Wilhelm when Germany underwent a rapid industrial expansion are used today for exhibitions, concerts, and conferences. Since 2009 the apprentices of Estrel Hotel have been responsible for running the restaurant, a concept and initiative that was founded by the management of Estrel Berlin in cooperation with the district administration of Neukölln. The restaurant with its beautiful ambiance offers a variety of fresh regional produce and delicious international cuisine, as well as an extensive wine menu. On Sundays and during the holiday season the restaurant hosts excellent brunches.

The museum Neukölln is located in the revamped horse stables of the 250-year-old manor park, while the historic cowshed has become a modern event location for up to 120 people. In addition, a goat pen, a concert hall and an open-air stage for public use belong to the estate.
